NHTC is built on tradition... and we're building for the future

You'll find several stories in this issue of The Communicator that talk about tradition. Whether it's renovating old buildings or honoring our pioneering citizens, I believe it's important for a community to hold fast to its past, even while it works toward the future.

The same is true for cooperatives. Cooperatives like New Hope Telephone can trace their beginnings back to a desire by citizens to do something better for themselves. Building on a spirit of community pride and concern for their neighbors, these pioneering men and women did the hard work of forming a member-owned utility that would borrow thousands of dollars from the federal government and build a system to improve everyone's lives.

That tradition is still important at New Hope Telephone Cooperative. This company was not formed to generate huge profits for its shareholders. It was formed to provide an important service to its members, and to look for ways to provide additional services to meet the needs of the growing communities it served.

NHTC was also formed to provide a quality, reliable service to a region overlooked by the big investor-owned utilities. Just because people choose to live in a rural setting doesn't mean they should have to sacrifice access to technology and the conveniences it brings.

Another reason your cooperative was formed was to deliver these services in a friendly, hometown manner, as quickly as possible and at a competitive price. When neighbors are serving neighbors, they treat one another the way they would want to be treated. And when a problem does arise, members can talk to a live person — on the phone or in our office — and discuss what needs to be done to remedy the problem.

These are strong traditions that have made NHTC successful for more than five decades. And we remain committed to these traditions even as we move forward into a future that almost seems like science fiction. As you read about fiber optic technology that can carry voice, high speed Internet and video services into your home across a thin strand of glass, remember that these great advances stand firmly on the foundation of quality and member-focused service that this company was built upon more than 50 years ago.

In Loving Memory

New Hope Telephone Cooperative remembers a dedicated employee who brought life and laughter with him to work everyday.

Don McCowan, 67, of Owens Cross Roads passed away in May. He served cooperative members for 40 years as the Central Office Supervisor before retiring in 2000.

McCowan was also a veteran, having served his country in the U.S. Army during Vietnam.

"You could not ask for a better neighbor or co-worker than Don McCowan," says friend and former co-worker Virginia Mann.

"His dry sense of humor is something I will always remember," she says.

Jim Warren, who worked with

McCowan for more than 20 years agrees. "Don had a mild-mannered personality. He got along well with everyone," recalls Warren. "He treated everybody the same. We all thought a lot of Don and his wife."

NHTC employees say his trademark phrase was, "Let me think about it." Now, all are thinking about him and his family.

Don is survived by his wife Linda Gail McCowan; daughter Crystal Anderton and her husband Chris; two grandchildren Chase and Cayley Anderton and two sisters Judith and Ann Martin. He was the son of the late Willie and Ruby McCowan.

The employees of NHTC extend their sympathy to his wife, children and family.

Protecting children from online dangers

As parents, you want to do everything you can to protect your child. You buy them protective helmets to wear while riding their bicycles. You teach them not to play with fire. But what are you doing to protect them while on the computer?

In today's world the Internet is an invaluable tool that almost every family has. Children can learn, research schoolwork, play games online and even chat with friends.

But there are dangers online. There are people who use the Internet to try to harm or exploit children. However, the Internet doesn't have to be scary.

New Hope Telephone Cooperative has prepared some tips for protecting your family from the dangers that can be found on the World Wide Web.

- KEEP THE COMPUTER IN A COMMON AREA. Even better, set the computer monitor so that it can be easily seen and check often.

- KNOW WHO YOUR CHILDREN ARE COMMUNICATING WITH. Teach them not to give out any personal information, this includes their age, where they live or what school they attend. Don't post pictures that could give out details either.

- KEEP THE DIALOG OPEN. Let your children know they can talk to you about anything and encourage them to tell you if anything scary or uncomfortable happens online.

- AGREE ON HOUSE RULES. Keep them posted near the computer monitor as a reminder of what is and is not acceptable.

- CONSIDER DISALLOWING CHAT ROOM VISITS. 89% of all solicitations for sex online occur in chat rooms.

- THINK ABOUT FILTERING OR BLOCKING SOFTWARE. NHTC offers filtering for only $5 per month. Or you can try software such as Cybersitter.

A wealth of information about Internet safety is available online. NHTC encourages parents to visit the following sites for more information:

- For young children: The Disney site surfwisland.com has games for kids and information about online safety.

- For teens: Visit 2smrt4u.com and <http://tcs.cybertipline.com>

- For parents: There are powerful tips for all age groups at getnetwise.com and www.childrenspartnership.org.▲

Can we see your house numbers?

When our servicemen are sent to your home to make repairs they don't always know the exact location. It is really important that your house numbers are prominently displayed. If your house sits well off the road, your house numbers should be displayed on your mailbox or a marker post.

It's also important to remember that while the mailman travels the same route daily to deliver your mail, emergency responders and repairmen could come from any direction. That's why it is important to post numbers on both sides of the mailbox or post. With a fire or ambulance emergency it could make all the difference.

PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENT: The Digital Television Transition

On February 17, 2009, TV stations will cease broadcasting in analog and switch to all digital signals. Analog TV sets not connected to cable, satellite, or other pay-TV service (in other words, TVs that use antennas or 'rabbit ears' for over-the-air TV) will need a digital converter box after February 17. Analog-only TVs should continue to work as before to receive low-power, Class A or translator TV stations and with cable and satellite TV services, gaming consoles, VCRs, DVD players and similar products. The federal government is offering discount coupons for viewers who need to purchase converter boxes for analog TV sets. For more information on the DTV transition or if you have any additional questions please visit the Web site www.DTV.gov. For a town to fully understand how far it has come, it must appreciate where it has come from. Every community stands on the shoulders of those who came before, of those who sacrificed, of those whose sweat and blood and labor provided the fuel for progress. Before today's highways, there was someone who said "let's build a road into town." Before our air-conditioned classrooms and irrigated football fields, a few neighbors decided to share their time and money to build a one-room school house. Long before a growing population and new subdivisions, someone took a chance and opened a general store or a service station or a barber shop and hoped they would have enough customers to stay in business.

The history of any city is colored with stories of such people, pioneers who saw beyond the current state of their hometown and into the possibilities of its future. They worked hard, and sacrificed. They led by example, and inspired others. They built buildings, opened businesses, held public office. They encouraged change, promoted progress, and from their visions created a new reality to benefit everyone. And in so doing, they forged the pillars upon which the next generation would write another chapter in the life of the town.

On August 24th at 2 p.m., the City of New Hope will acknowledge the contributions of two such pioneers. In a community-wide celebration, the old Texaco service station will be named the Jabbo Taylor Center, and city hall will be named the James Nolan Hill Building. Here are the stories behind these honors.

A time of Dedication

Jabbo Taylor

In the curve of Main Street in downtown New Hope sits a building that holds countless memories for local residents. For over 50 years, the Taylor family kept the community's vehicles on the road by providing fuel and basic services from the Texaco station.

On August 24th, the building will become known as the Jabbo Taylor Center, named after the man who ran the service station for many years. He was also known throughout the area for calling basketball games, and he also started New Hope's fire department.

Though the old service station has sat empty for a number of years, it will soon become busy with commercial activity again thanks to the efforts of Larry and Tara Furlough. The couple, owners of Tara Graphics in New Hope and Tara Manufacturing in Owens Cross Roads, has remodeled the structure with some exciting plans for its future.

"We knew this building had potential," says Larry Furlough. "We wanted to maintain the original look of the building, to preserve its integrity."

And they did. The building retained its nostalgic feel through the modern renovation. Initially, it will house a local business in a portion of the space, and plans are to establish a community outreach service in another section.

Jabbo Taylor's son, Butch Taylor, says he and his family appreciate the efforts by the Furloughs to repurpose the building. "It has brought back a lot of memories of my Dad and family," says Taylor, a retired New Hope coach and teacher who now serves in the Alabama House of Representatives. "This has made our family very proud."

Butch Taylor spent countless hours working at the service station as a youngster, and even after he became a teacher. Jabbo Taylor worked there with his father E.L. Taylor, the original proprietor.

New Hope City Hall will be dedicated as the James Nolan Hill Building. Craig Hill, left, is assistant principal at Madison County High School and is following in his father's footsteps by serving on the New Hope City Council. Mayor Hill's wife Linda, right, was a cheerleader at New Hope High School, and was cheering her sweetheart on from the sidelines the night he ran the first touchdown ever scored on the school's new football field.

James Nolan Hill

Some buildings have such a history that it seems the town grew up around them. So it is with the old Butler Brothers building at the heart of downtown New Hope.

On August 24th, citizens will dedicate the building to the memory of James Nolan Hill. A New Hope native who always had a heart for the progress of his town, Hill served on the New Hope City Council from 1980 to 1984 and as mayor from 1988 to 1992.

It was during his tenure as mayor that Hill saw the opportunity to bring the past and the future together for the good of the town. "City hall was where the New Hope Telephone Cooperative building sits now," says Craig Hill, son of the former mayor. His father led the efforts to purchase the old Butler Brothers building and renovate it for use as a new city hall, even while preserving the structure's historical characteristics.

His plans did not stop there. Mayor Hill also led the city to purchase the adjacent building to locate an extension of the Huntsville Public Library.

"He dreamed of New Hope growing," says Linda Hill, the mayor's high school sweetheart who was married to him until his death in June of 2000. "He had a lot of positive dreams for this town."

One of those dreams included the passage of zoning ordinances for the city, which are often controversial in the beginning stages but always necessary to a community's growth. "That is a good indication of his progressive leadership," says Craig Hill, who himself serves on the New Hope City Council today.

James Nolan Hill was always thinking of ways to make things better in New Hope, his family remembers, so people would be proud of their hometown and choose to stay there. The fruit of his vision and efforts are in evidence in his own family — his wife and two sons all live within a mile of each other, and his sons' wives both teach at New Hope school.

Mark your calendar

Make plans to attend the dedication ceremonies for these two historical buildings on Sunday, August 24, 2008. The Jabbo Taylor Center will be dedicated at 2:00 p.m. at the building followed by a ceremony for the James Nolan Hill Building at City Hall. Refreshments will be served by the New Hope Historical Association and Family First Homemakers Club inside City Hall immediately after the dedications.

Kellers Tackle and Grocery

Fishing stuff, food and gas

Local icon adds deli, increases tackle inventory under new ownership

Serious anglers across the United States know that North Alabama offers some of the best freshwater fishing in the country. And every year those coming to pull largemouths and crappie from Lake Guntersville discover what the locals have known for decades: Kellers is the place to stop before hitting the water.

Darrell Newman has increased the tackle inventory at Keller's since purchasing the landmark store in 2005.

Kellers Tackle and Grocery is a Madison County landmark. Opened by Ernest Keller almost a half-century ago, it was owned and operated for many years by his daughter Doris and her husband Thomas Barnard.

While it bears the same name today, the little country store has a new proprietor. Darrell Newman, a native of West Virginia, bought Kellers in 2005, and has been slowly making changes to the establishment. "It has always been my plan to have a tackle shop near the lake," says Newman, who transferred to Madison County with the Toyota plant five years ago. "This is a little earlier than what I wanted to do in my career, but when I saw the store I saw a lot of opportunity for it."

Newman responded to a newspaper ad offering a business opportunity, and soon found himself spending a great deal of time at Kellers. He made the decision to purchase the store, knowing he wanted to make some changes. "When I bought the store it was a convenience store that sold a little bit of tackle," he says. "What I want it to be is a tackle shop that sells a little bit of convenience items."

Newman took a slow approach to change. He started by looking at existing inventory, cleaning out older items, improving the selection of tackle, and monitoring sales to see if customers responded.

They did. "We've increased our tackle inventory by 500 to 600 percent," Newman says. This includes dozens of brands of lures, and a wide selection of rods, reels and combos. And the store continues its tradition of offering plenty of live bait.

A statement on the store's

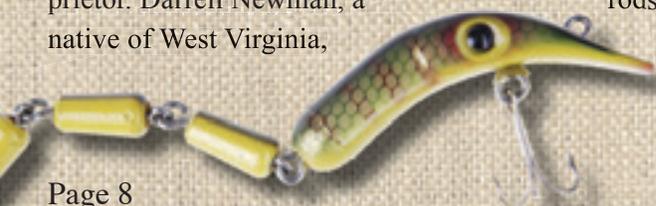

Web site, www.kellerstackle.com, reads: "We are not a Wal Mart, or a Bass Pro Shops, but we are convenient. We carry a moderate, but well thought out supply of the basic items that you would need if you were getting ready to hit the water."

No one wants to fish on an empty stomach, and Kellers has long provided snack foods, drinks and even cold cuts. But for Newman, one thing was missing. "We had all you needed except for hot food," he says. And so he gradually began the process of phasing out the garage, where they offered tires and oil changes, and remodeling the space for a modern deli.

Customers appreciate the effort. It has been one year since the deli opened, and the response has been overwhelming. Some mornings, especially Saturdays, employees find customers in the parking lot when they arrive to open the store before 4 a.m., waiting on a hot breakfast.

Lunch is served from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m., offering hungry fishermen hot sandwiches on toasted bread, old fashioned hamburgers, corn dogs and more.

While Newman has made many changes to the store, he understands the importance of maintaining the Kellers tradition. "Thomas and Doris were pillars of the community," he says. "They were well thought of, and they supported their community.”

That commitment is something he has worked hard to continue, supporting local schools, little league teams and such.

Since buying the store, Newman has retired from Toyota to devote more time to Kellers. “There’s been a steep learning curve,” says Newman, who had no retail experience prior to purchasing the establishment. But he has learned much, and looks forward to growing Kellers into the tackle shop of his dreams while meeting the needs of fishermen looking for that next big catch from the waters of North Alabama. ▲

With the addition of the deli at Kellers Tackle and Grocery customers can now get hot biscuits before they hit the lake in the morning and get cold cuts for the cooler. Those looking for something hot can indulge in a hamburger, grilled chicken or toasted sandwich, chicken fingers and more. The deli opens for breakfast at 4:00 a.m. and starts serving lunch at 11:00 a.m. daily. Art Show For Students at New Hope

Students at New Hope High School competed in a school wide Art Competition before the school year ended, netting three students cash prizes. The Art Show is an annual event sponsored by the Parent Teacher Organization and the NHHS Art Club.

Maria Keel, 11th grade, took home first place and $100 for a self-portrait drawn in a torn paper portrait collage style. Kristyna Dudley, 11th grade, expressed her view of the war through a painting that earned her 2nd place and $50. Shelby Davis, 10th grade, drew a self-portrait that helped her secure 3rd place and $25.

New Hope High School second-year art teacher Patti Owen says the students, including those not in art class, were excited the day of the competition. She says those students who participated impressed her with their different styles and hard work.

“I was very pleased with the students’ work. They have worked hard,” she says. “The talent put forth with effort is amazing to see. Incredible.”

The types of media the students work with will help make the transition from high school to college easier. Owens said the students had the opportunity to go to the Birmingham Museum of Art and Alabama A&M Ceramics department. While at Alabama A&M University, students were able to work with Ceramics Professor Jennie Couch, who judged this year’s competition.

Winners of the NHHS Art Show are shown above with their artwork. They are (L to R) Shelby Davis, 10th grade; Kristyna Dudley, 11th grade; and Maria Keel, 11th grade. They will be among several students in Ms. Owen’s art class who will have artwork on display at Alabama A&M University in July.

“The three pieces chosen for the top prizes are examples of combining technique and content to create a work of visual harmony and unity,” says Couch. “Each of these three works exhibits control and mastery of the medium that enhances the subject matter. There is a sense that the artists were searching for the most interesting way to deal with the problem presented to them.”

In July, NHHS students’ artwork will be on exhibit at Alabama A&M

University. Gallery Director and Professor of Printmaking, Scott Smith, chose the pieces to display at the Morrison Gallery. Those students whose art will be on featured are: Emily Sadler, Melanie Childers, Maria Keel, Ashley Welch, Stephanie Forsythe, Anna Parks, Ashleigh Quick, Jessica Hubbard, Shelby Davis, Breana Cooper, Brandy Bearden, Kristyna Dudley, Ashlynn Maples, Anna-Kathryn Carpenter and Taylor Bates.▲

PASTOR'S NOTES

BY LARRY BISHOP, PASTOR
 FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH
 NEW HOPE

Working outdoors on a hot summer day will make you thirsty! I try to quench my thirst with water, Gatorade, iced tea, and soft drinks, but I just get thirsty again. Sometimes I think, if I could find something that would really quench my thirst I would make sure I had plenty on hand during these really hot summer days.

This reminds me of a story in the Bible where Jesus tells a woman that he can give her a drink of water and she "shall never thirst again". (John 4) Jesus was not talking about a literal drink of water but something much more meaningful.

It seems that this woman was thirsting for a meaningful and lasting relationship. Jesus asked the woman to "Go, call her husband and come here. The woman answered, and said, I have no husband. Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband; For thou hast had five husbands, and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband; that saidst thou truly."

Jesus used thirst for water to reveal the real truth. Broken relationships seemed to be the story of her life. What she needed was a meaningful stable relationship. Jesus did not point an accusing finger but offered a solution to her "thirst". The woman left her waterpot, and went into the city and invited others to "Come and see a man, who told me all things that I did."

Are you "thirsty"? Come and meet the thirst quencher!

See you in church Sunday.

New Hope School receives $66,000 in state funds to renovate the rock gym

Rep. Butch Taylor, who brought back $66,000 in state funding for the school, is pictured with New Hope Assistant Principal Raymona Bevel.

When Butch Taylor was a young boy, he remembers coming to the old rock gym at New Hope to watch his father call basketball games. A few years later, he was on the court himself, first as a player and then as a coach. Today, as a member of the Alabama House of Representatives, Taylor is helping keep the gym open to serve another generation.

Earlier this year Taylor secured $66,000 in education bond money for New Hope School. The funds will be used to renovate the gym, which is in need of repairs to its walls and ceilings.

Raymona Bevel, assistant principal of the elementary and high school, says the money will help create a better learning environment for students. “We are so thankful to have Butch Taylor in the Alabama House of Representatives,” she says. “He knows education, he knows our town, and he knows our needs.” ▲

✝ Inspiration Corner

If you follow this column you know Independence Day is my favorite secular holiday. Our history reminds me of men living faith; men who were more afraid of future generations living in tyranny than they were of dying; men willing to fight at all cost so you and I, and even people in other countries, could live in a Land of the Free. Patrick Henry wrote in a letter to his president: "It is in vain, sir, to extenuate the matter. Gentleman may cry 'Peace, peace' – but there is no peace. The war is actually begun! Our brethren are already in the field. Why stand we here idle? What is it that gentlemen wish? What would they have? Is life so dear, or peace so sweet, as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take; but as for me, give me liberty or give me death!"

I wonder if, in God looking down and seeing His children being chained to sin and death, could Jesus have said something to the effect, "I know not what course others may take; but as for me, give THEM liberty or give me death!" Those who accept Jesus' death as their Liberty are free, yet many still live in bondage. I pray as we celebrate our nation's Independence, believers will also celebrate freedom by witnessing to others the victory of Christ, no matter the "cost". Should you not yet be free from the bondage of sin and death, please look in a Christ-serving church near you.

One Nation Under God! Amen!
